UACB, NYO requests that Boston conduct background investigation of FISHER with the purpose of conducting an interview if feasible and on Bureau authority in accordance with 105N of the M of I. Care should be exercised to protect the original source in this matter. Because the NYO is not certain of the extent of contact by  or other Soviet nationals, it is recommended that Boston approach this interview on substantially a pretext basis. Although the NYO would be interested in developing any relationship between FISHER and  initial contact with FISHER should focus solely on obtaining a personality assessment of  or any other Soviets with whom FISHER has had contact; however, Boston should be alert for the possibility of asset development of FISHER. ~~(S)~~ (U)

For U.S. and P.L.O. Talks

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — The sooner the United States begins exploratory talks with Palestinians of all views the better it will be for us, for Israel, and for peace in the Middle East. The logic for opening a dialogue with those Palestinians in the Palestine Liberation Organization who are willing to talk with us is compelling:

1. The Palestinians are important. Everyone, most of all Israel, recognizes that Palestinians constitute the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict. If the center of gravity of the Palestinian movement can be persuaded to accept a peaceful settlement with Israel, then peace with Egypt, Syria and Jordan should not be too difficult. But if most Palestinians oppose a settlement, peace with the Arab states is doubtful and real peace is out of the question.

2. Peace with the Palestinians requires peaceful means. Political ostracism and military measures simply inflame the Palestinian problem. Palestinians cannot be expected to abandon violence until they see some alternative. It is more clearly to our interest than theirs that they become involved in the political peacemaking process.

3. The Palestinians may be best represented by the P.L.O. Suggestions that we talk with Palestinians but not with the P.L.O. misperceive both the problem and our proper objective. There are no other Palestinians interested in negotiating. Many Palestinians disagree with one or more P.L.O. actions or statements but all insist that it is with the P.L.O. that the world must deal and it is through the P.L.O. that change must take place.

The only Palestinians rejecting the P.L.O. are those very extremists who fear peace with Israel and who also reject the idea of talking. But even if there were some conservative Palestinians who were willing to negotiate, we should probably prefer to have the P.L.O. caught up in the negotiating process.

By Roger Fisher

It is only the most powerful Palestinians—ones who have earned their spurs in the armed struggle—who can carry the bulk of the Palestinian people with them in talking with us and in making peace with Israel. We need not recognize the P.L.O. nor negotiate with it to recognize the desirability of involving its leaders in future negotiations.

4. We should not wait for a unilateral acceptance of Israel. There is now a standoff in which Israel does not recognize the P.L.O. and the P.L.O. does not recognize Israel. It is politically impossible for either side to move first. A Yitzhak Rabin who unilaterally announced that in exchange for nothing Israel would recognize the P.L.O. and would accept the existence of a Palestinian state (even though the P.L.O. still did not recognize Israel nor the existence of an Israeli state) would be promptly out of office.

So would a Yasir Arafat who unilaterally announced that the P.L.O. recognized Israel and accepted the existence of an Israeli state, while Israel still refused to recognize the P.L.O. or the right of the Palestinians to have their state.

The United States, through exploratory talks with both sides, must seek to find some acceptable formula for mutual acceptance and some acceptable basis for negotiations. It will not happen simply by waiting.

5. Delay is costly. With Arabs, as perhaps nowhere else, personal contact over a period of time is crucial. It provides a basis for mutual confidence and productive discussion.

Officials in our Government should be establishing now those personal relationships with Palestinian leaders that will be needed in the future.

Each day's delay limits our future ability to influence events. Refusal to listen to Palestinian concerns as expressed by their leaders is like stuffing cotton in our ears. It deprives us of the understanding we need to be most effective in persuading them and in reconciling their genuine interests with those of the Israelis.

Finally, delay runs the risk that Mr. Arafat might die or otherwise leave office, requiring some other Palestinian leader to demonstrate his toughness for two or three years before he felt strong enough to sit down and talk.

6. Talking would have a constructive impact. If those Palestinians willing to talk get no response, those who insist upon violence will get increasing support. Among Palestinians, Mr. Arafat is seen as a pragmatic, non-ideological, national leader who is prepared to talk. George Habash and some others outside the P.L.O. are the extremists who propose military measures until there is no Israel.

For the United States to open talks with officials of the P.L.O. would not be seen as rewarding violence. Where it counts—that is, among Palestinians—exploratory talks would increase the political power of those Palestinians who are prepared to pursue their future by political means. Further, an ongoing dialogue about questions of status and the basis for serious negotiations reduces the danger of further destructive and inflammatory "dialogue by epithet" as in the General Assembly charges of racism.

Roger Fisher, professor of law at Harvard, recently spent six months in the Middle East as executive editor for the public-television series "Arabs and Israelis."

The New York Office (NYO) previously asked Boston to conduct investigation regarding Fisher, a Professor of Law, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, pursuant to Manual of Instructions, Section 107N, with a view toward interviewing him upon Bureau authority. NYO was desirous of determining subject's asset potential since, according to a sensitive source, he had been contacted by [ ] KGB (PR) on 1/23/74. The NYO noted the subject recently published an article in the "New York Times" concerning the Mid-East situation which they felt might come to [ ] attention, and thereafter stimulate another contact between Fisher and [ ] The above contact dealt with the arranging of a meeting between Fisher, [ ] (no known intelligence affiliation) and certain unspecified professors. It is not known whether the meeting actually took place; however, [ ] is believed to have delivered an address at Harvard previous to this contact. Fisher is a former Assistant to the Solicitor General of the U. S. and is considered prominent in his field. While no substantial derogatory information was developed concerning him, it is noted his name appeared on a list entitled "Delegates to the Town Meeting" of the American Youth Congress (AYC) and he reportedly attended the annual closed meeting of AYC in 1941. (The AYC was designated by the Department pursuant to Executive Order 10450). Also, available information indicates his father was associated with a number of organizations during the late 1930's and early 1940's which have been cited as communist dominated or controlled. Subject has had contact ~~(S)~~ (U) with Soviet Ambassador Anatoli F. Dobrynin in 1966 in connection with an attempt to stop the Vietnam War. Fisher is a specialist in International Law, Relations and Conflict and he has been involved in matters relating to the Mid-East situation, which also is [ ] area of expertise. Referenced Boston communication recommended against interview of subject since they feel it could result in untoward criticism of the Bureau. Referenced NYO airtel restated their request for Boston to interview Fisher, UACB.
